31	Cornelia St.	590 A	47	1877	183-1877	3-story rear building dates to 1843, built for Stephen Terhune; former location of Café Cino, a coffee house that Joe Cino opened in 1958 and which served cappuccino in shaving mugs; it became the birthplace of the off-off Broadway theater movement, and was one of first places to extensively program plays with gay themes. It is also considered to be the first gay theater in New York City. In this tiny café space, such playwrights as John Guare, William Hoffman, Robert Patrick, Sam Shepard, Doric Wilson, and Langford Wilson presented their earliest plays; the cafe closed in 1968, a year after Cino committed suicide. 55-57	Washington Square South (aka 241-247 Thompson St.)	541	23	1888		Judson Memorial Baptist Church; Individual landmark; Built as a memorial to Adoniram Judson, the first American Baptist missionary in Asia, and funded in part by John D. Rockefeller; In the 1940s the activist congregation of this church began sponsoring avant-garde exhibits and performances. Playwright and minister Al Carmines led the church and staged his works here after 1958. In the 1960s and 1970s the church was used as a hall for gay and lesbian political gatherings, including a mass protest in 1966 after the Lindsay administration attempted to "clean up" Washington Square.
