

NYU Plans 2031

Planning for the Next 25 Years of NYU's Physical Development

You are invited to an Open House on our University's Strategic Space Planning Initiative

Since last spring, the University has been engaged in a vital effort to plan for its physical space needs over the next two decades. This process has included a wide-ranging dialogue that has incorporated our internal community, our neighbors, and our elected officials. At the next Open House the design team will present preliminary options and approaches for how the University might meet an anticipated 6 million square feet of space needs between now and 2031 in a manner that both satisfies our academic needs and does honor to the neighborhood and the city in which we are located. Your participation and feedback is critical. The University will be reviewing these options and looking for input from our various constituencies as we move toward a preferred option over the coming months.
